Phoenix Writers Club

Hello to Cindi and all of my friends at the Phoenix Writers Club;

Congratulations on your centennial! That is a superb achievement and one that the Arizona Authors Association hopes to mirror, one day. The Phoenix Writers Club was a bastion of freedom for women writers when it first formed, providing value and support to incredible authors whose voices were suppressed. Through the years it has remained a critical engine for literary progress in Arizona and the world beyond. Your growth, resiliency and viability, over a century of rapid change, is something rarely accomplished and deserving of praise.

I'm thrilled to be able to applaud the accolades of the wonderful authors within the Phoenix Writers Club, as well as their president and members of their board, who facilitate and herald those accolades. To me, you are all soul sisters (and brothers!) I look forward to many years of collaboration and camaraderie with your group. May the next hundred years be equally momentous, and may our shared goals bring us in even closer alignment with each other. I feel privileged to witness your achievements, learn from them, and offer my most heartfelt congratulations.

Peace, Katy
